1 Exhibition = exposition

Baker Street London. He liked playing the violin and he enjoyed reading. He was very dispassionate and emotionless. This meant that he did not show his emotions. He practiced boxing and fencing.

GRAMMAIRE :

1 "Emotionless" est un adjectif. Il peut se décomposer en 2 parties :

EMOTION + LESS

En anglais, lorsque l'on ajoute le suffixe "LESS" à un nom, cela indique une privation. Donc "emotionless" veut dire: impassible (qui ne montre pas ses émotions).

Bonus : Voici une deuxième énigme que tu peux essayer de résoudre si tu le souhaites (ce n'est pas obligatoire). Je donnerai la réponse mardi prochain :

Case 2

As we were walking through Regent's Park one afternoon, on our way to St. John's Wood, Holmes drew my attention to a pair of young women engaged in earnest conversation with a somewhat older man.

"Observe those ladies, Watson. What can you tell me about them?"

I studied them closely. They were as alike as peas in a pod, identical in facial structure, deportment, dress and coiffure. I said as much to my companion, and asserted that they surely had to be twins.

"Indeed?" Holmes looked amused. "For a fact, I can tell you that Louise and Lisa Barnes share the same mother, the same father and the same precise day of birth, but I'm afraid you are utterly wrong. They are most certainly not twins."

Can you explain?
